SENIOR SERVICES LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE

Lifelong Community website created to serve as an information portal for county seniors

Jonesboro, GA- Clayton County Senior Services recently launched its new Lifelong Community website featuring information that supports the initiative's three major objectives; to encourage healthy lifestyles, expand access to service and promote housing and transportation options for seniors. The new site is user friendly for seniors featuring a larger font size and is easy to navigate when searching for information.

In collaboration with the Atlanta Regional Commission (ARC) and numerous county agencies including the Clayton County Board of Health and the Clayton County Chamber of Commerce, the Lifelong Community initiative has grown into a movement that is being embraced throughout the entire county. The City of Morrow serves as just one of the local municipalities that has incorporated the initiative's objectives into a city resolution and has moved forward in creating a community garden that encourages a healthy lifestyle by serving as a healthy food resource; the promotion of outdoor exercise; and is an excellent focal point for positive community interaction.

The new Lifelong site provides a drop down menu that contains news and information that will empower and educate the senior community in addition to a calendar highlighting just some of the many activities taking place at the county's senior centers. "In order to better serve our older residents of the county it is important that we provide them with an all-inclusive, informational website", said director of senior services, Mary Byrd. "As we continue to move forward with our Lifelong Community initiative our website will serve as an informational portal displaying the great strides that are being made daily with the program throughout the county."
